

Prof. Nalin Wijayawardene

College of Biological Resource and Food Engineering, Qujing Normal University
P.R. China

Dr. Nalin Wijayawardene joined College of Biological Resource and Food Engineering, Qujing Normal University, China in 2019 as a Professor in Mycology. Dr. Nalin completed his B.Sc. special degree in Biodiversity Conservation at Faculty of Applied Sciences, Rajarata University of Sri Lanka. Dr. Nalin obtained his Ph.D. in Mycology from Mae Fah Luang University, Thailand in 2016. His Ph.D. topic was, 'Taxonomy and phylogeny of dematiaceous coelomycetes and nomenclature of asexual fungi'. Dr. Nalin has published more 120 SCI publications and his H' index is currently 29. He is serving as an editor of Fungal Diversity, Mycosphere, Current Research of Environmental Applied Mycology, Studies in Fungi and MycoKeys. He is currently collaborating with three Chinese universities as a visiting professor and as an honorary research associate at Institute of Research and Development in Sri Lanka. Furthermore, he was a visiting scientists of National Institute of Fundamental Studies (NIFS) in Sri Lanka, in 2018. Dr. Nalin's current research interests are taxonomy and phylogeny of asexual fungi, fresh water and marine fungi, cave fungi and fungi from extreme environments.