

Asst. Prof. Dr. Jariya Sakayaroj
School of Science, Walailak University
Thailand

Dr. Jariya Sakayaroj graduated her Ph.D. from Prince of Songkla University, Thailand. She worked as a research scientist at National Center for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology (BIOTEC) for 17 years, then moved to Walailak University in 2018. Now she is working as a full time lecturer at School of Science, Walailak University. Her expertise focuses on fungal diversity, marine mycology and fungal molecular systematics. She won several awards for example -the International Women in Engineering and Science (WES), awarded by National Research Council- Canada, the 2011 Young Scientists Awards, sponsored by UNESCO Man and Biosphere (MAB) Programme. Dr. Jariya has experienced as one of the organizing committee of the 10th International Mycological Congress in 2014 and recently the Asian Mycological Congress 2021. She has published more than 100 papers in the international mycological journals.