

Prof. Travis Glare

Lincoln University, New Zealand

Professor, Director of the Bio-Protection Research Centre of Lincoln University in New Zealand. Engaged in research in insect pathology, molecular biology and ecology. He was trained at the Australian National University, CSIRO Division of Entomology and with the USDA insect pathogens laboratory at Cornell University, New York State. As a research scientist, he served as general manager of strategy. He has published more than 150 journal articles, published several books, and received several patents.